

Honor APRIL 2026

SAY IT:

Honor: Letting others know you see how valuable they really are

KNOW IT:

ASK A GROWN-UP:

- Who are some people we should honor in our community?
- Talk about a time when you felt honored by someone else.

ASK A KID:

- How can you honor people who are valuable to you?
- How does it make you feel when someone shows you honor?

SEE IT:

It is easy to look back through history and learn about people who have earned our honor. In school, we learn about great people who have made important contributions to our community and our country.

As a family, watch "Liberty Kids: Honor and Compromise." (<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=6P1h17S1bZI>). As you watch, pause the video when you see examples of how the characters show honor to others. Take time to discuss how and why each of these characters show honor.

BE IT:

Make a list of people in the community who you can honor as a family. Come up with some ways your family can let these people know you see how valuable they really are. Maybe you can make some thank you cards, bake cookies, find a way to help them with an important project, or purchase a small gift. Start a family habit of identifying people who deserve your honor and let them know they are valuable to you.

Honor
APRIL 2026

It may seem like there is never enough time to get everything done.

Consider using the rhythm of your daily life to shape the values in your home – take advantage of the time you already have:

Morning Time:

Be a coach. Help them find purpose by starting the day with encouraging words.

Drive Time:

Be a friend. Talk about life during informal conversations as you travel.

Meal Time:

Be a teacher. Have conversation while you eat together.

Bed Time:

Be a counselor. Strengthen your relationship at the end of every day with heartfelt conversations about feelings.

So don't miss it. Use the time you have (without technology or distractions) to deepen relationships and encourage values in your home.
